Hi!

After listening to the recent Grade 11 public speeches, two themes stuck in my mind: the issue of climate change, and material happiness. I realized that a common idea unites the two; your age is the limit. By that, I mean that people believe they need a college degree or a family to get what they want and make a difference, because they are too young right now. Some of the most prominent activists across the globe are high school age, and what sets them apart isn't necessarily a higher IQ or better morals, but just different circumstances. They have allowed the passion they possess for a cause to overcome them. While I am definitely not suggesting anyone drop out of school to go learn a dead language in another country, passion is the key to making a difference, and it is something we all have within us. Maybe none of us are climate change experts, and maybe you can't become a doctor/astronaut/singer before you graduate. However, that doesn't mean you can't start paving the way down your own path. Under and over estimation are both dangerous, so don't do either. Trust yourself, and the passion you hold.

Sincerely,
Samantha Bloom

1. Montreal's New Metro Trains Are Too Big For the Tunnels

Last February, after months of delay and anticipation, the STM finally updated our metro with new AZUR trains. However, on Sunday, January 15th, the entire orange line of the metro was shut down due to an “equipment problem.” It turns out that our brand new trains don't actually fit into the metro tunnels. Interesting how the STM only realized this after they entered into a $1.2 billion contract with the Bombardier-Alstom consortium. According to MTL blog, STM knew of the issue in May 2013 and announced that they would shave off the concrete in the tunnels to make room. I guess they didn't make enough room. Hopefully, this issue will be solved by the time all 52 trains are set to run by the end of 2018.

2. Donald Trump's Attempt to Replace Obamacare Fails:

On Friday March 24th, Trump's government faced a major setback after the bill that would repeal and replace the Affordable Care Act was pulled from Congress. Despite the fact that the Republicans control the House and the Senate, there were still not enough votes to pass the bill. While the Democrats were completely against it, the Republican Moderates didn't support them either. Some felt that the repeal was unfair as it would leave many people without healthcare, and others felt that the bill didn't go far enough to replace Obamacare to the extent that they expected. Either way, after this setback, Trump's deal-making skills and ability to keep his campaign promises will most likely be questioned. According to NDTV, “Trump said he would turn his attention to getting “big tax cuts” through Congress, another tricky proposition.”

3. Largest Anti-Corruption Protests In Russia Since 2011

On March 26th, protests broke out all over Russia after Alexei Navalny, a popular politician who is planning to run in the 2018 election, suggested that Russia's Prime Minister Dmitry Medvedev had used bribery to accumulate luxuries such as mansions, vineyards, and yachts. This style of living contrasts highly with that of Russia's poor. However, in Russia, unauthorized protests are considered illegal. Thus, the Russian authorities arrested over 1000 protesters. The European Union is current calling on the Russian government to release them. On March 27th, Alexei Navalny was sentenced to 15 days in jail for resisting the orders of the police.

The Comeback of The Goat

Super Bowl LI will certainly be considered one of the most entertaining sports events of all time. (BACK THAT UP) This year's Super Bowl was a matchup between the Atlanta Falcons and the New England Patriots, where the Tom Brady-led Patriots were slight favourites over Matt Ryan's Falcons. Although Atlanta had superhuman Julio Jones, arguably the best receiver in the NFL right now, New England were considered favourites due to their coach Bill Belichick, superstar veteran quarterback Tom Brady, and an overall more-experienced team.

In spite of their underdog status on the grandest stage in the NFL, the Falcons exploded out of the gates and pretty much put the game to bed by halftime, where they had a 25-3 lead. No Super Bowl team had ever come back to win from even being down by only 10 points at any point in the history of the Super Bowl. Even the New England faithful must have been shocked and disappointed with no hope of a comeback.

After this dominant half, the Atlanta Falcons players were smiling on the sidelines and the Patriots fans had given up and lost hope. However, the New England Patriots were able to overcome a nearly impossible task by surmounting a 25-point lead in order to defeat the Atlanta Falcons 34-28. The Falcons may have started off on fire, but their offense and defense seemed to disappear and the Patriots took advantage.

Indeed, the Patriots seemed like a new and more energetic team in the second half, particularly in the third quarter. This comeback included a few extremely clutch plays, as well as several strange decisions by the Falcons coaching staff which might have lost them the game. Julian Edelman made one of the most important catches of the game. Not only did it help the Patriots move down the field on their way to their comeback, but it is now also considered one of the greatest catches in Super Bowl history.

On the other hand, the Atlanta Falcons had several plays, which were unnecessary and prevented them from closing out the game and defeating the Patriots.

After receiving his fourth Super Bowl MVP award and fifth Super Bowl championship, Tom Brady is, without doubt, the GOAT (greatest of all time). The Brady and Belichick duo solidified themselves as the greatest combination of all time with five Super Bowls. After seeing the Golden States Warriors blow a 3-1 lead in the NBA, the Atlanta Falcons managed an even more impressive feat, blowing a 25-point lead during the 51st Super Bowl.

Chinese New Year 2017

What? The Chinese New Year (“Xīn Nián”) or Spring Festival (“Chūn Jié”) is the most important festival in Chinese culture. According to legend, thousands of years ago, the beginning of the Chinese New Year started with a mythical beast called “Nián,” an extremely cruel and ferocious beast which the Chinese believe, eats people on New Year’s Eve. To keep “Nián” away, “red-paper couplets” are pasted on doors, torches are lit, and firecrackers are set off throughout the night, because “Nian” is said to fear the color red, the light of fire, and loud noises. Early the next morning, as feelings of triumph and renewal fill the air at successfully keeping “Nian” away for another year, the most popular greeting heard is “Congratulations!” (“kung-hsi”).

Chinese New Year has become one of the world's most prominent and celebrated festivals, with the "largest annual mass human migration in the world."

How? Within China, regional customs and traditions concerning the celebration of the Chinese New Year vary widely. Often, the evening preceding Chinese New Year's Day is an occasion for Chinese families to gather for the “annual reunion dinner.” It is also traditional for every family to thoroughly cleanse the house, in order to sweep away any ill-fortune and to make way for good incoming luck. Windows and doors will be decorated with red paper-cuts and couplets with popular themes of “good fortune” or “happiness,” “wealth,” and “longevity.” Other activities include lighting firecrackers and giving “lucky money” in “red packets.”

timeanddate.com

When? The Chinese lunar calendar is used to determine the Chinese New Year, so the date of it varies every year. The first day of the New Year falls on the new moon between January 21 and February 20. In 2017, the first day of the Chinese New Year is on Saturday, the 28th of January, initiating the year of the Rooster. Celebrations traditionally run from the evening preceding the first day, to the Lantern Festival on the 15th day of the first calendar month.

Where? Nowadays, Chinese New Year is celebrated in countries and territories with significant Chinese populations, including Mainland China, Hong Kong, Macau, Taiwan, Singapore, Thailand, Cambodia, Indonesia, Malaysia, Mauritius, and the Philippines. (Pictured on the right is Asia’s largest temple, Kek Lok Si in Penang, Malaysia – illuminated in preparation for the New Year.)

Chinese New Year At LCC

This year, LCC granted several elements for this special day that warms all Chinese families with a sense of belonging not even found in China.

On January 27th, the Grade 2 class made two big red dragons with teachers and held an amazing dragon parade in the dining hall. A special Chinese lunch was provided by the chefs.

On January 30th, during lunch recess, Middle and Senior School students celebrated the Chinese New Year in the SAC. There were interesting Chinese horoscopes (brought by Sunny Huang), a presentation with a game (made by Cynthia Qin), a traditional Chinese instrument called Er Hu (brought and played by Yolanda Yang), New Year's red lanterns (brought by Sally Qi) and typical Chinese candies (brought by Angel Liu). Below are pictures taken during this fair.

What Is a Human Being?: Seems like a fairly simple question. Not for the European Union, however. The world sits back in awe as the cartoon world of The Jetsons slowly becomes a reality. In February 2017, the EU will vote on whether or not to give robots legal status as electronic persons. This issue raises many ethical and legal concerns. Of course, robots will have to adhere to certain laws and regulations. For instance, all robots would have to have a kill switch. Another proposed regulation states that a robot may not injure a human being. However, while the advancement of technology can be great, we must (as natural biological human beings) acknowledge that there have to be limits as to such advancements. While this sci-fi world seems impossible, it is much nearer than we think.

Getting Ahead of Those Monday Morning Coffee Cravings: You might want to take things a little slower. Northumbria University in Britain was recently fined £400,000 for accidentally given 30g of caffeine to two student participants in an experiment. That is the equivalent of 300 cups of coffee! The study aimed to determine the effect of caffeine on exercise. The researchers were supposed to give the participants 0.3g worth of caffeine. However, they miscalculated the amount when they misplaced the decimal on their phone calculator, leading them to administer one hundred times the required dosage. Death from just 18g of caffeine has been reported. Fortunately, the students ended up in the intensive care unit and are now both fine. Now you know: next time you go to Starbucks, opt for the Tall, not the Venti.

President Donald Trump: As in he officially dropped the “elect” part of his title on January 20, 2017 when he was officially inaugurated as the 45th President of the United States. Donald and Melania Trump walked into the inaugural concert to Heart of Stone by The Rolling Stones. The song seems fitting considering Trump has already signed an executive order (just five days into his presidency) for government officials to start working on the wall along the Mexican border. This is not his only act so far. Just hours after the inauguration, The White House’s website was updated. The pages talking about important issues like climate change, LGBTQ rights and civil liberties were replaced by a list of Melania’s charitable works and the brands for which she has modeled. Her magazine cover appearances and jewelry line at QVC are also advertised. Who needs to discuss civil rights and climate change when you can make America great again with a big friendly wall and your wife’s Sports Illustrated Swimsuit Issue pictures?

HUMANS OF LCC

Balancing your academics with your athletic schedules can sometimes be very difficult. With the amount of work you have for each class, time management is a big factor in being a student-athlete, especially if you're on a senior team like hockey. Having sports five to six times a week can really affect the amount of time you have to do your work as a lot of players on the team have realized. The amount of early dismissals and trips that some of these sports teams take means that being a student-athlete comes with a lot of responsibilities. Staying on top of your work and not falling behind are always key. When Giuliano Latella, who is currently on the Senior Hockey team, was asked how he balances his academics with his athletics, he stated, "Achieving a balance between academics and athletics is all about effective time management and a commitment to push yourself that extra mile. Sports take up a huge amount of time and homework does as well, making it hard to balance both. Everyone wants success in both, but only those who have enough willpower to do homework between the end of school and the start of practice or, at times, late at night will succeed. One must master the use of their time and make the decisions that will get them to their goals regardless of what their friends are doing. It's very easy to go out after school with friends, but not so easy to swallow lower grades. Make the right choice and do what is best for you."

Star Wars Rogue One Movie Review

Finally! After about a year since the last Star Wars movie was viewed in theatres across the world by millions, Star Wars nostalgics and fans of space action alike are gifted with a new epic space opera war film. To avoid the confusion, Rogue One: A Star Wars Story is not a sequel to the Force Awakens (2015), which was the eighth film in the Star Wars series, rather it is simply a prequel to the first Star Wars film, Episode IV (1977).

Even though Rogue One was the first movie I saw in theatres in 2017, I think it is set to be in my top 3 for the year. The reason why I love this movie so much is because it appeals to so many different audiences: Star Wars fanatics who have obsessed over the series since 1977, those who enjoy action flicks, comics, families, and everything in between. Critics may find that the movie was slow and half baked, but to the regular audience, Rogue One had everything that constitutes a great movie.

What stuck out to me the most wasn't really the characters that you grow to love over the course of the movie, including Jin Erso and Kaytoo, rather it was the action scenes that really kept me glued to the screen. Also, the pivotal end scene that I won't spoil is enough to get me to see it a second time in IMAX. What did you guys think of the movie? Feel free to let me know!

Romy's Book Review

Behind Prison Walls, How a Mother's Love Gave Strength to her Daughter

I recently read the book, Behind Prison Walls by Ann Novick. Behind Prison Walls is the true story about how the author's daughter, "Miriam" and son-in-law, "Daniel" ended up in a French prison, following a pleasant vacation. "Miriam" and "Daniel's" crime was that they put their trust in the wrong person, a young man from whom they unknowingly accepted a suitcase of illegal drugs. The American couple were immediately arrested and thrown into jail, since French law presumes guilt, rather than innocence.

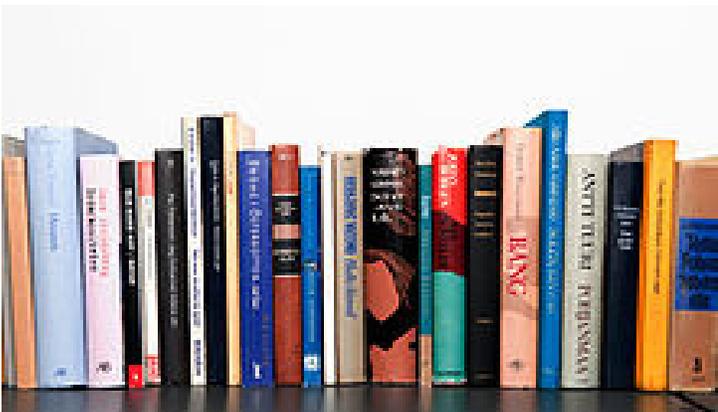

Mrs. Novick's strength and resilience during this horrible experience is exemplary. Rather than fall apart, she rose to the challenge and made it her mission to fight for the release of her pregnant

The story also provides the reader with letters that "Miriam" wrote to her mother. As a young Orthodox Jewish woman, her faith in G-d and her positive attitude helped her through these dark times. It is evident that "Miriam" got her strength from her amazing mother.

Overall, I really enjoyed the book, Behind Prison Walls. It provides the reader with a fascinating look at what it is like to be a prisoner in a foreign country with a very different set of laws. Novak is a talented writer who takes the reader on her journey through her vivid descriptions and her daughter's letters. I would highly recommend it.

Lucille's Hits It Out Of The Park

Restaurant Review: Lucille's hits It out of the park

Lucille's Oyster Dive, otherwise known as Brasserie Lucille's, is a restaurant that not only serves exquisite and tasty foods but also makes you feel welcomed. The restaurant offers a variety of delicacies ranging from the fancier Lobster Cavatelli to the more kid-friendly Chicken Parmesan. Last Thursday, my father and I had dinner at Lucille's and decided to share three dishes, Lucille's famous Fish Tacos, the new Mixed Grilled Seafood and their world renowned Filet Mignon.

The Fish Taco includes a delicious piece of freshly grilled Mediterranean sea bass with a mixture of red cabbage, a colourful mango puree and tomatillo that will make your mouth water.

The combination of the tomatillo spread and the mango puree gave the taco a sweet taste, yet I still tasted the lightness of the fish. In my opinion, the Mixed Grilled Seafood is the best dish on Lucille's menu. This small yet scrumptious meal includes a variety of seafoods such as calamari, octopus and shrimp. Each one is grilled to perfection and leaves the customer wanting more. The Filet Mignon does not disappoint. Grilled to a perfect medium, the steak will melt in your mouth. Even though you may not have room for any more food, you can't leave without trying their Famous Chocolate Layer Cake. The cake is rich yet the icing is light and buttery.

Lastly, the service at Lucille's is exceptional as the food arrived in a timely fashion and the waiters are always available to tend to any demands that you may have.

Lie To Me...or how to act naturally when telling your parents you're just having a sleepover at that smart kid's house, the one whose grades your parents wish you had.

When someone conceals emotions, leakage of that emotion can often be found on that person's face, these are micro expressions.

Scientists used to believe that babies learned micro expressions from their parents. It was believed that when a baby was born it mimicked his father or mother's face. However, it was eventually realized that congenitally blind babies, who have been blind since birth, make the same facial expressions at the same time as seeing children. Essentially, this means that facial expressions are not learned, they are genetic.

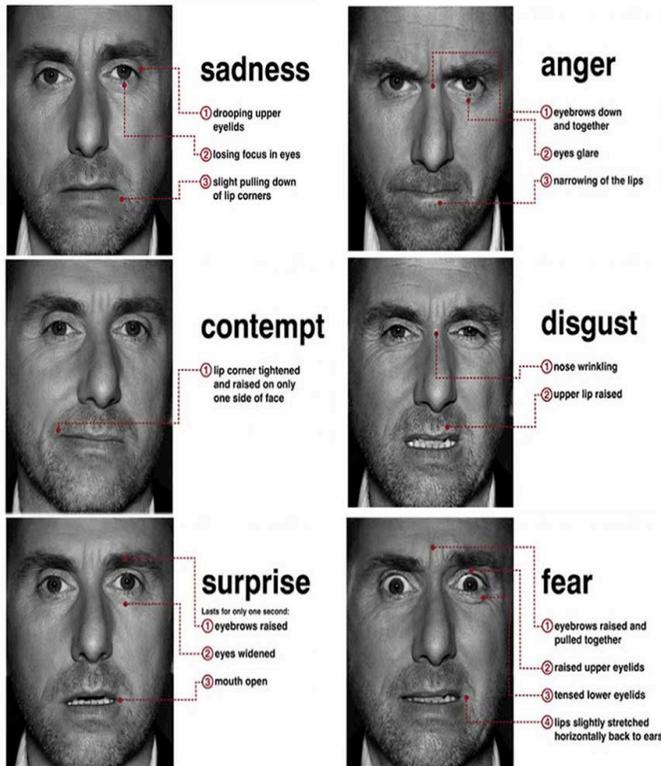

Dr. Paul Ekman, an American psychologist, discovered that we all show the same expressions for seven basic human emotions: disgust, anger, fear, sadness, happiness, surprise, and contempt. They are universal, no matter one's gender, race or culture everyone makes these basic micro expressions.

Although we can control certain facial expressions, like holding a smile or making a frown, a micro expression is very brief; it is an instinctive flash of emotion that lasts less than a second. Our face flashes hundreds of micro expressions everyday and these quick ones are the most accurate for decoding emotions.

The progress of the study of these expressions could revolutionize fields like marketing, but could be especially off help in the field of criminology. This type of understanding could help in solving investigations and recognize when people are lying.

Dr. Paul Ekman who is a pioneer in the study of emotions and their relation to facial expressions, inspired the TV show "Lie to me" wherein a scientist Dr. Cal Lightman studies micro expression, body language and tone of voice to determine when a person is lying and why. Dr. Lightman helps law enforcement and government agencies uncover the truth. I really recommend the show if you want to know more about not only micro expressions but human behavior in general.

Check out some micro expressions:

Fun Facts About Liars

1) Bill Clinton

On his affair with Monica Lewinsky President Bill Clinton said, “I did not have sex with that woman”. His use of distancing language suggested he was not being truthful.

2) Eye Contact

Most of us would think people avoid eye contact when lying. It is actually a myth, they make more eye contact to see if you believe their lies.

3) Physiological Flight Response

This is a response to an acute threat to survival that is marked by physical changes like blood flowing from the extremities to your legs so you are ready to run, your hands get cold first.

4) Body Language

Even though a high percentage of communication is thought to be non-verbal, no single part of the body—such as the eyes or hands—reveal the whole story when it comes to lying. People who are lying often become more still: Hand gestures that normally accompany talking may occur with less frequency or intensity, and there may be fewer arm and leg movements. The person becomes more focused on telling the lie, so they get quieter in their body.

5) Surprise

Real surprise lasts for less than a few seconds, if it’s not the case for someone, he or she is faking it.

6) Rephrase The Lie Backwards

Often, a lie is planned out as series of events in a certain order to cover the bases, but not the other way round. It will be easy to remember all the details if it is the truth, but not for a lie.

2016: the Year of Constant New Releases

This year, several artists released hits that will be played over and over again, without anyone getting tired of them. While many well-known artists have tragically passed away, such as David Bowie and George Michael, their spirits will live on through the influence they have left behind, which will surely be prevalent in 2017's musical releases. If all the hits of 2016 had to be listed, the list would be never-ending, so this is just a few of the songs that will still be overplayed in a couple years.

-Work, Rihanna (feat. Drake)

-Black Beatles, Rae Sremmurd

-One Dance, Drake

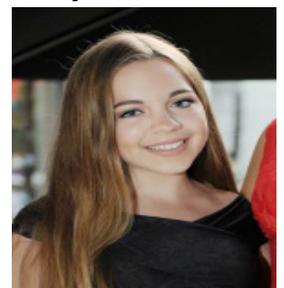

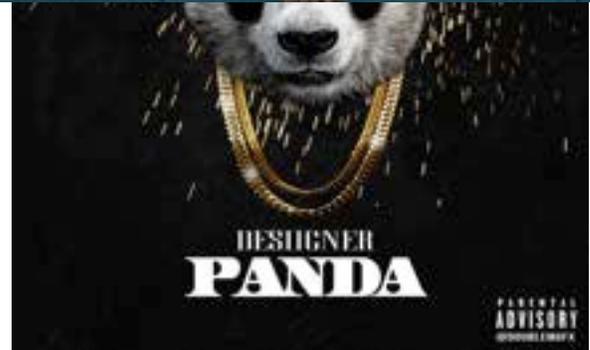

-Starboy, the Weeknd

-This Is What You Came For, Rihanna & Calvin Harris

-Closer, the Chainsmokers

This One Time at Band Camp...

Every year, the members of the Senior Band joined by the Grade 8 musicians, partake in a weekend of bonding, rehearsal and, of course, fun. This year's trip proved once again to be exceptional. Not only were we students coached by specialists in our specific instruments, but we also managed to escape the grumpy chef's wrath. We were able to really improve and grow as an ensemble instead of being yelled at for making a hole in the wall. That's progress. The extra activities were also a huge hit as the Grade 11 and 12 students were able to keep the tradition alive and organize another one of band camp's famous talent shows. This year we were lucky enough to witness everything from the most angelic singers to jazz ensembles, interpretive dancers and even skilled jelly bean eaters. All of this to say, if you missed it, you should be jealous.

Vanilla Sprinkle Cake!

1. Spray microwave safe coffee mug with vegetable oil spray.
2. Place 1 tbsp. butter in the mug & melt in microwave (about 30 seconds).
3. Add 2 tbsp. sugar, 1/4 tsp. vanilla and 1 pinch salt and stir together.
4. Add 1 egg yolk, mixing thoroughly.
5. Add 3 tbsp. flour and stir until combined.
6. Top with sprinkles and cook in the microwave for about 40-45 seconds. Check to see if it's done with a toothpick.

DR. FOZ

Who is Dr. Foz? Moi ha ha ha ha, you'll never know!

My best friend has been kind of flaky lately, we are fighting more than usual and we just aren't as close as we used to be. What should I do?

Hi! This is perfectly normal and it happens to everybody at some point. Friends just grow apart or grow in separate directions sometimes, and that's okay. Friendships also go through phases, and not every moment will be the best; you won't be close 100% all of the time like in the movies. It's nice to have a friend you are close with like that, but when you are that close it can get to a point where you just get on each other's nerves a bit. If this phase has been lasting a while for you and your friend, talk to them. Sit down and have a conversation about the issues. If they are a good friend, they will be receptive to your feelings and will be willing to talk it out. If not, maybe consider that it might be time to distance yourself from them. Friendships don't always last forever, but it's not the end of the world. Branch out and make some new friends. Who knows, maybe you and your friend will work it out some day. Regardless, it's always good to have many friends so that if you have a fallout with one friend, you have others to fall back on.

I have okay marks in school, but I struggle to do well, even when I go to get extra help from my teachers. Is there anything else I can do to boost my marks?

You sound like a very ambitious and driven student; this is very good! It sounds like you are taking the proper steps right now to succeed. Going to see your teachers for extra help is a great resource, although, sometimes despite our best efforts, we don't always achieve what we want. This is just a part of life. However, there are some other things you can do to help you better understand the material you learn in class. For example, for your English and French classes, websites like Shmoop and Sparknotes can really help you understand the plot, characters and deeper meanings of books. Shmoop even has some resources for math and science, as does Khan Academy. Sometimes, when you are having trouble visualizing a concept (like a science experiment), looking up demonstrational or explanatory videos on YouTube is helpful. Another resource at your disposal is your peers. They are in the same boat as you: they are learning the material for the first time too. Forming study or discussion groups to hash out ideas is probably the most helpful thing you can do. Just remember to be an active learner, and not a passive learner. I hope this helps!

Horoscopes

Aries (March 21 - April 19): Look to your left; the person sitting there will become one of your closest friends this month. If there's no one there... well, sucks to be you.

Cancer (June 21- July 22): You'll feel the need to make yourself a bagel soon. All I can say is careful with the bread knife.

Libra (September 23 - October 22): Okay, last month I told you to be a vegan. That was a bad idea. I apologize. There was a chocolate chip on my star chart and I thought it was a star. Just go have a steak; you need it.

Capricorn (December 22 - January 19): Try something new this month with your friends; you may find that you like beet farming.

Taurus (April 20 - May 20): You're known for your great wit, intelligence and friendliness. Let's hope you're still known for that when I write your next horoscope.

Leo (July 23 - August 22): Now because Pluto's in retrograde, or something, you have to do a marathon, but you have two choices; you can run it or catch it on Netflix.

Scorpio (October 23 - November 21): I saw a picture of someone making a house of cards out of Kit Kats instead; get on that.

Aquarius (January 20 - February 18): Let's face it, you're kind of a mess, but you'll figure it out, I promise.

Gemini (May 21 - June 20): Now I have a task for you. The stars say that you should go to Costco, and listen carefully now; you need to try EVERY SINGLE FREE SAMPLE. That is the feast the stars have told me to give you. You're welcome.

Virgo (August 23 - September 22): Ah, Virgo, follow your heart, but don't follow someone into a dark alley. That would be bad.

Sagittarius (November 22 - December 21): This is your month, Sagittarius! JUST KIDDING! Get ready for all hell to break loose.

Pisces (February 19 - March 20): Challenge; eat five hot dogs in five minutes. This is where you say, "Challenge accepted."
